

City filled with music

Although the KSU music activities are winding down with the end of the fall semester, there will be plenty of other music to hear in Manhattan this week.

The final concert in All Faiths this year will consist of a student recital of string chamber music this afternoon at 4:30.

On Monday the USD 383 Elementary School Choir will be performing in the Manhattan High School Auditorium at 7:30 p.m. This choir of young people has developed a great deal over the past couple of years and their performance should be of interest to more than just the parents of the singers. The choir will be variously directed and accompanied by Deborah Scherling, Fran Kahler, Miriam Zeibert, Susanna Parker, Heather Reed, and Phillis Murphy.

With the Christmas celebrations at hand there will be quite a selection of live music to listen and dance to later in the week. Amongst those performing locally will be the Geri Van Trio. Backed by her rhythm section, Geri will be playing the piano and singing at Bockers II on Friday and Saturday evenings.

Also for the weekend and on through Christmas, New Jersey guitarist Gary Stewart will be performing top 40 selections in the Burgundy Lounge of the Holidome.

The Ranch Saloon will be providing a choice of offerings. On Friday the Kansas City group Prairie Star will provide the music and on Saturday evening Rope Burn, a country and western group from Lawrence, will be on hand.

Finally, Brothers Tavern will also have live music over the weekend. Bill Lynch and Lee McBee, a rhythm and blues duo from Lawrence, will give a pair of farewell performances on Friday and Saturday evenings. After two and a half years together, the duo will be splitting up; all the more reason to hear this popular pair one more time.
